

Trichocereus

These cacti are the majestic sentinels of South America. They are the columnar relatives of the echinopsis cacti that enthral us with their beautiful trumpet shaped blooms.

From the huge T. terschekii to the smaller but no less enthralling T. grandiflorus, their blooms are among the most exciting and beautiful flowers on earth.

While related to the many other Cereoid species throughout the Americas the Trichocereus groups are distinguished by their fantastic blooms.

Examine the many species at various web sites including www.desert-tropicals.com and others.